

home of the champions  press pack involved: just minutes from loch ericht, we are perfectly positioned as a base for kite surfers, wind surfers and kayakers. loch ericht has been recognised as being a class-a venue for these events due to unbeatable wind conditions by world champion and world record holder kirsty jones. we are also positioned on route 7 for road cycling and you can mountain bike straight from our door into the wilderness, or go just 6 miles from the laggan wolfrax, an intermediate and advanced mountain biking center. also close by is ben alder, a favourite iconic summit for climbers, and fort william where the world championships final for mountain biking is held. we are also within an hour's drive of four different snow resorts.

informed: with a background in action sports and natural photography in the u.s. and europe, combined with a holistic approach to living, calum and ally richardson-dobie strive to create a place that harmonises a range of passions and pursuits. this is embodied in great food, extreme sports & music at the heart of the inn.

inntune: our offer of something a little different in the highlands extends to all aspects of your experience here. in the restaurant and bar we offer all the luxuries and convenience of the city: free wireless internet, a plasma screen featuring world movies, live music footage, and extreme sport documentaries, and an endless play list featuring fresh cutting edge artists that span the genres. think mellow vibes, thick lazy beats, trip hop. oozy, beguiling, insouciant, swaying, sensual, as we slip into the night...

indulge: our menu offers the finest in local produce, frequently organic and fair trade.

we mix traditional favourites with innovative delights to create a tantalising variety of gourmet meals.

while here, why not try our organic fair trade coffee or the famous single malt dalwhinnie whisky from the highest distillery in scotland ?

our menu boasts local venison, arbroath smokies and an array of ever changing seasonal specials. mmm.

inn the past: our modern eclectic style is balanced by an extraordinary amount of history. dalwhinnie is the highest village in the scottish highlands and the coldest inhabited place in the whole of the united kingdom. seriously extreme! dalwhinnie is gaelic, meaning 'the place of the champion'. it takes this claim from the highland games held here long ago. the inn was constructed in 1715. it has played host to general wade, bonnie prince charlie, robbie burns and queen victoria. if walls could talk we'd surely hear some interesting tales! the river truim that runs through our grounds is a tributary of the river spey and is the subject of a book titled, 'fishing a highland stream' by john inglis hall.

it is only 1½ hours from glasgow and edinburgh and 1 hour from inverness.

what's more, because dalwhinnie has a station on the mainline, there are daily direct services to and from london.
